

ELECTROSENSITIVITY IS RECOGNIZED AS A CAUSE OF DISABILITY TO WORK IN SPAIN BUT, AT THE SAME TIME, THE HIGH LEVELS OF WORK ELECTROPOLLUTION ARE CONSOLIDATED BY ROYAL DECREE

While the Electrohypersensitivity (EHS) is recognized in Spain as a cause of inability to work in areas "with Wi-Fi, wireless telephony and mobile phone masts", the Spanish central government in office has approved a labor legislation consolidating the high electromagnetic pollution limits without guaranteeing the technological alternatives that reduce it, in line requested by the lobbies of telecommunications

The High Court of Justice of Madrid (TSJM) has recently recognized a permanent total disability of a telecommunications engineer who worked at the multinational Ericsson in environments electromagnetic pollution<sup>1</sup>. This exemplary ruling<sup>2</sup> has evidenced the absence of "white zones" (EMF-Free zones) and highlighted the jetlagged limits of exposure what fail to take account of the bio-effects collected by the medical biography. This obviously contradicts, among others, with alerts of the European Environment Agency since 2007<sup>3</sup>, the resolutions of the European Parliament in 2008/2009<sup>4</sup> and the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe (PACE) in 2011<sup>5</sup>, as well as the opinion of the TEN section of the European Economic and Social Committee in 2015<sup>6</sup>, and the municipal and autonomous community positions<sup>7</sup> to implement the Resolution 1815 of the PACE and / or the EHS recognition from 2011 until now.

This TSJM follows judicial steps already undertaken both in the State Spanish<sup>8</sup> as in other EU countries and non-EU<sup>9</sup>. It is in line with the resolution of the European Parliament in 2009 calling "on Member States to follow the example of Sweden and to recognise persons that suffer from electrohypersensitivity as being disabled so as to grant them adequate protection as well as equal opportunities"<sup>10</sup>. In addition, it is in line with the positions of numerous professional associations in the field of health and the environment<sup>11</sup>, and numerous international appeals<sup>12</sup>.

But only 16 days later, the Spanish Royal Decree 299/2016 of 22 July (on the protection of the health and safety of workers from the risks related to exposure to electromagnetic fields)<sup>13</sup>, moving in the other direction, is approved. If the limits of exposure to electromagnetic pollution allowed to the general population are increasingly being questioned for being based only the thermal effects (reductionist and short-term vision), rather than all bioeffects over time. This Royal Decree allows even greater exposure limits in the workplace, allowing usual values five greater than for the general public<sup>14</sup>. This standard occupational health while acknowledging the existence of the bio-effects (without reporting bioeffects registered in continued exposure -within the limits to the public-<sup>15</sup>) does not contemplate the long-term effects nor establish the concrete indications (use guidelines / technological alternatives) to minimize exposure. If however, European health agencies and professional associations are already providing such indications<sup>16</sup>.

These measures contrast with calls to prevention from the trade union level, especially in schools, demanding the "promotion of wired Internet connection to prevent the health problems arising from wireless connections, and to encourage integration in the school community of people with electromagnetic hypersensitivity"<sup>17</sup>, as applied in nursery schools in France<sup>18</sup> and in municipal nursery schools of Hospitalet<sup>19</sup>.

The PECCEM and Electro and Chemical Sensitive for the Right to Health (EQSDS), as promoters of municipal motions against the Spanish General Law telecommunications of 2014<sup>20</sup>, advocates of the recognition and comprehensive care of the EHS<sup>21</sup> and co-drivers of European Manifesto for a regulation of EMF exposure which truly protects public health<sup>22</sup>, continue to demand from the different administrations the measures real protection against electromagnetic pollution in all areas of life and especially to Children and Teenagers, in line with the PACE Resolution 1815 (2011) and the opinion of the EESC TEN section (January 2015).
